WE SURVIVED

GENOCIDE IN RWANDA

"For those who were not there, it is near impossible to comprehend the enormity and brutality of what happens during genocide. The stories in this book bring us a little closer, providing a glimpse into a period in Rwanda when, for three months, values most people take for granted – such as the respect for human life – were crushed as the Government lifted moral constraints and made killing an obligation, mobilising the population to destroy all Tutsis and any Hutus who did not share the genocidal ideas."

"If you want to prevent yourself and your loved ones from being victims of the next genocide, survivors must tell their stories — and we must all listen to them."

François-Xavier Ngarambe, President of Ibuka, the Rwandan Survivors' Association

"These moving accounts by survivors of the Rwandan genocide that Aegis has compiled should be read by everyone. Each one reminds us intensely of the human loss from genocide – men, women and children who are of equal value to people anywhere else, but were not considered important enough to be saved."

Lt Gen the Hon. Roméo A. Dallaire, Senator, Commander of UN forces in Rwanda, 1994.

"When I visited the Kigali Memorial Centre, I read some of the powerful testimonies of survivors of the 1994 genocide. I felt humbled by the dignity of the survivors in the face of such appalling experiences, and admiration for the work of Aegis Trust in Rwanda. Preserving survivors' stories – like the moving testimonies contained in this book – is clearly a vital component of the efforts through education to prevent any future recurrence of genocide in Rwanda."
